Remanufacturing returns a used product to at least its original performance with a warranty that is equivalent

4 / 10

or better than that of the newly manufactured product. With respect to Remanufacturing – manufacturing effort involves dismantling the product, the restoration and replacement of components and testing of the individual parts and whole product to ensure that it is within its original design specifications;

– performance

after Remanufacturing is expected to be at least to the original performance specification; and – any subsequent warranty is generally at least equal to that of new product. This assumes that
