II.2.4) Description of the procurement

Reporting mainly includes regular, scheduled reports and also some very limited responses to ad-hoc requests. In addition, the Audiences Team use data feeds to support their knowledge base and their own internal analysis. To meet these requirements data is drawn from a wide range of sources including BARB, surveys and panels, web stats and social metrics. Most of the data sources provide input on a regular basis (real time, daily, weekly, monthly or quarterly), some of them are one-off projects. The Supplier will be required to analyse and use source data for the BBC's services and its key competitors from the industry sources and bespoke BBC surveys and systems. Reports and processes are automated where possible using tools such as Tableau and Alteryx. The objective is to limit as much manual intervention as possible to ensure the most efficient use of external and internal resource.

To help facilitate this the BBC's data management system (referred to internally as Redshift, SCV or the Data Lake) is able to host some data sources and allows us for directly linking BBC data sources to automated reporting and dashboards. BBC Audiences is using this data management system to improve the way we combine data sources, the way we automate reports and the way we feed into /Audiences, the BBC's internal audience research portal. We expect that by the time that this Procurement is complete, the BBC will be able to allow third party access to SCV in order to retrieve, enrich and deposit data, under strict Information Security requirements.

An essential step in the reporting process is data enrichment. This part of the Service provided by the Supplier adds additional programme level metadata including repeat statuses, identification of series & episode numbers, genre coding and nations and regional opt-out programming. The Supplier is required to provide secondary data enrichment coding and tagging for the BBC and selected competitor content. Not all input to generate the data enrichment can be provided by the BBC.

The BBC has also developed its own proprietary measure to reflect content performance across linear and non-linear, which includes all known viewing in the lifetime of a programme. This key metric known as All Screens is generated and delivered by the service via the data processing of multiple data sources. BBC All-Screens data is a dataset created by the BBC that enables comparisons between linear TV viewing (measured by BARB panel data, which is people-based) and iPlayer viewing (measured by online analytics census data, which is browser-based). Complex modelling and detailed deduplication is required to deliver a level playing-field for meaningful analysis.

The supplier is expected to work with the ever changing requirements of the business and the industry we operate in. There are continuous reviews of the deliverables to ensure they meet the business needs. Therefore the supplier will be required to flex with the business and provide a solution that allows the deliverables to change as the business needs a change. Our ambition is to continue to review, change and automate where relevant. The role of the supplier is to support the BBC in its strategic objectives and to work with them on identifying more efficient and effective means to deliver audience intelligence into the business. In addition, the supplier will be required to support gradual de-commissioning activities of some of the Services over the full contract term as we continue to explore whether we can bring certain reporting elements in house.
