Successful bidders will be required to develop scripts / use existing scripts and produce highly polished outputs for broadcast, social media and other web based clips.

Services required will include, but not be limited to;

Taking static communication briefs and developing a script / storyboard to bring the concept to life and which captures and engages the relevant targeted audience.

Producing adverts for television, short punchy, witty scripts are required, for training, education and informational briefs, scripts effective in both English and Welsh are required. A range of topics can be covered and require scripts and concepts which deliver complex and important information in a manner which ensures the audience remain interested and continue to watch etc. and which communicates the aims and objectives of the project. With regard to Welsh adverts, consideration should be given to ensuring language works within the context of the piece, pure translation is not always the best way to achieve this. Music, composition, the appropriate use of models as well as locations and props all add in bringing a script to life. Successful bidders will have expertise in generating ideas, sourcing music, models etc. and will understand and can address licensing issues etc., ensuring that a fully developed script is delivered which is compliant to all relevant regulations and meets the objectives of the individual brief.

Successful suppliers must be able to provide various models of traditional publicity display materials including (but not limited to) roll-ups, portable modular stands and various banner systems with their casings.

In addition to the more traditional display equipment, suppliers must be able to offer a range of alternative, light-weight and portable equipment that can be transported, erected and dismantled by an individual with ease.

Successful suppliers must also be able to provide newer technologies including (but not limited to) digital display equipment, presentations for iPads / tablets and alternative methods of displaying information through portable systems.

In addition to the purchase of equipment, the Client will also be looking to loan equipment on an ad hoc basis.

Successful suppliers must have the ability to print / manufacture the graphic panels and undertake repairs to the various systems we may purchase as part of this Framework, as well as those that we already have in stock, which includes roll-up banner stands and modular curved systems.

Suppliers may be required to set artwork for panels themselves or to work from supplied artwork which we provide – often at short-notice of around a week and sometimes requiring quick delivery. In addition the production of non-standard panels is required for larger exhibition stands and systems in various formats: lightweight material, vinyl, hardboard, flexi-board, stand-alone panels etc
