II.1.4) Short description

The appointment of Ipsos MORI to design and deliver a national survey with people living with diabetes (type 1 and type 2). The results of this survey will inform the policy direction of the national diabetes programme, placing people living with diabetes at the centre of our future strategic direction.

The survey will measure perceptions, expectations, and experiences of diabetes care, as well as preferences for how services are delivered and identify solutions to meet their needs. The survey data will be used to develop a patient-centric segmentation of people living with diabetes, which aims to understand the priorities for creating and delivering a positive and appropriate experience; and identify how these priorities apply to different types of service users, and the value they might place on service options.
