When the DVA receives information that a driver may be suffering from a medical condition that may impact on their ability to drive safely, staff in DVA will carry out an initial assessment on the information available and may be able to determine the application. However, when medical officer assessment is required, cases are referred to the qualified medical officers. Medical Officers may be able to assess the case on the information provided, may determine that further medical information is required or may determine that a specialist medical assessment is required, in which case the driver is referred to the specialist medical assessment service provider.
