Network Rail is currently delivering technical skills trainings centrally. In line with the recent regionalisation of the railways, Network Rail is also moving to a regional delivery model for technical Skills training apprenticeships.

The five regions of Network Rail are:

- Eastern Region
- North West & Central
- Scotland's Railway
- Southern
- Wales & Western

The five technical disciplines of apprenticeships to be trained are: -

- Track
- Signalling
- Overhead Lines (OHL)
- Telecoms
- Distribution & Plant (D&P)

To deliver these technical disciplines, we are undertaking market research to find providers which meet the associated Rail Technician competency requirements. We are seeking providers which have the capability of delivering these programmes to the highest quality whilst providing value-for-money. The programmes are for the apprenticeship Levels 3. It is essential that throughout the delivery of the training content, railway context is provided with relevant examples of application to the industry, or the delivery of courses by a trainer with railway courses who can provide practical contexts gained from experience to the theoretical content.
