Description

The FSA is seeking a supplier to deliver a UK-focused legume allergy study under a 12-month contract. The work will include a systematic evidence review, mapping of legume use in food products, and a feasibility assessment of social media analytics, culminating in a comprehensive final report.

Tenders are invited to address the following objectives:

- Review UK-relevant evidence on the prevalence and characteristics of legume allergy, and examine cross-reactivity between legumes, as well as provide information on how processing affects their allergenicity.
- Provide an overview of the use of legumes in UK food products (i.e. which legumes are being added to which foods and in what quantities).
- Conduct a feasibility study on using social media analytics to generate insights into consumer perceptions and experiences related to legume allergy.
- Consolidate all findings into a comprehensive report.
