The Authority is in the midst of an International Health Regulation (IHR) Project and continued service delivery is essential to enable the objectives of the project to be met without disruption. A change of contractor would create economic and technical difficulties as the deliverables are integral to the Authority's IHR service delivery within the host country (Zambia);

(ii) would cause significant inconvenience or substantial duplication of costs for the contracting authority,

A change in contractor mid-project and a transition to an alternative provider would be both costly and result in significant inconvenience to the Authority's global health operations in Zambia potentially rendering them unable to meet the objectives of the IHR Project.
