Description

HSE have a requirement to re-purpose an existing structure onsite for use as a façade fire test facility. The structure will be used for experimental projects studying fire spread over the external walls of buildings. Any type of façade construction may need to be tested and so the system has been designed to allow for this.

The work required to achieve the objectives of this work, is to install a series of steel beams on to which standard sized fireboards can be attached.

The works are required at our Buxton site SK17 9JN.
