II.1.4) Short description

Covid-19 restrictions mean that infrastructure designed for visitors and communities near to "visitor hotspots" in rural and remote areas can be overwhelmed, as was experienced throughout 2020.

In Scotland, local authorities and other public services anticipate sustained demand on infrastructure, teams, volunteers and resources. The experiences of visitors and residents are all impacted by public services that provide infrastructure for transport and parking, camping, littering and waste management, leisure, health and safety.

There is an opportunity to develop technology that can help create positive experiences for visitors and local communities while also contributing to sustainable tourism and the wellbeing including economic benefits of rural and remote communities.
