GH4015

Description

- Two prototype units of a fully mobile, containerised EV charging system ("CH4RGER") that integrate a 40kVA biomethane generator, battery storage, and solar input to provide off-grid, multi-vehicle charging. The system will include six charge points with variable output (7.5kWh-22kWh), housed within a weatherproof standard shipping container. It will feature Victron-based hybrid power management, remote monitoring, and control capabilities, with all logic written in an open, Victron-compatible format. Designed for ease of deployment, security, and maintainability, the CH4RGER will also support optional point-of-sale integration for use in retail settings.
