Intermediate Care is an umbrella term describing an approach involving a collection of services working with common shared objectives and principles. It provides a set of bridges at key points of transition in a person's life, in particular from hospital to home or from home to hospital and from illness or injury to recovery and independence; helping them achieve their personal outcomes. The key aims of the Service are prevention, rehabilitation, enablement and recovery.

Intermediate Care can:

- Prevent unnecessary acute hospital admission or premature admission to long-term care;
- Support timely discharge from hospital
- Promote faster recovery from illness
- Support anticipatory care planning and self-management of long-term conditions

The Service will concentrate on providing independent intermediate care for Supported People, in South Angus, who are requiring rehabilitation intervention before they can return home from hospital (Step-down) or to prevent admission to hospital (Step-up).

Supported People will meet the following criteria: -

Step-down Care

- Person over 65 years old;
- Requires a period of rehabilitation / community care assessment/intervention prior to returning home;
- Potential for recovery / rehabilitation within 21 days. This period of intervention should be no more than 6 weeks in duration.

- Does not require 24-hour medical intervention;
