In addition, Children's services support 48 UASC care leavers who were formerly looked after who can be supported with a programme of education up until they are 25 years of age.

Unaccompanied asylum-seeking children can be some of the most vulnerable children in our society. All local authorities have the duty to assess and provide accommodation and support to unaccompanied asylum-seeking child who present in their area.

The Home Office defines UASC as a person under 18 years of age, who is applying for asylum and is separated from both parents and not in the care of a guardian.
