II.2.4) Description of the procurement

HMRC has a bold ambition to increase and encourage the use of digital channels to communicate with customers in similar ways to leading private sector companies.

This is likely to lead to a forecasted reduction in print/outbound mail volumes and increase the use of other digital channels.

This is likely to fall within the lifetime of this new contract. From this, the following benefits are anticipated:

- Improved customer experience through more convenient, faster means of transacting with HMRC
- Improved colleague experience through improved technology, improved ways of working and re-focus onto high value work
- Opportunities to drive increased compliance and close the tax gap
- Increased efficiency and value for money

HMRC are looking to incorporate its current Input and Output communications contracts into a single contract in order to improve efficiency and realise substantial savings.

The initial service lines to be delivered under the contract shall include:

- The provision of current inbound and outbound communication services - this includes provision of printed post, SMS, outbound Email, and scanned mail .
- The provision of support, advice, and innovation to create and jointly deliver efficiencies in the current service and in how to move towards digital channels in the space of input and output communication.

This contract will be enabled for Government Banking to use.

The maximum contract value will be £140million over the contract period of five (5) years plus a possible two (2) years extension.
