Scope

Description

To guarantee the efficient utilisation of technology, transform our digital and customer services, and fulfil public service commitments, His Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) requires research subscription services.

This service will assist in setting strategies, managing projects, deploying new technologies, and ensuring regulatory compliance, amongst other things.

Additionally, an on-demand ad-hoc advisory service is necessary to translate industry-leading insights into actionable plans, across different business areas and topics.

The requirements have been split into 4 lots based on individual business area requirements with varying scope.

Please note, the Authority have determined this requirement to be VAT recoverable meaning the contract value will be exclusive of VAT. A value for 'Including VAT' has been included within each relevant section as required by the FTS system. Values provided are inclusive of the optional 12 month extension. Values are indicative maximums and provide no commitment of spend or usage.

Lot 1. Lot 1 - CDIO (Chief Digital and Information Officer)

Description

To guarantee the efficient utilisation of technology, transform our digital and customer services, and fulfil public service commitments, HMRC requires research subscription services. This service will assist in setting strategies, managing projects, deploying new technologies, and ensuring regulatory compliance, amongst other things. Additionally, an on-demand ad-hoc advisory service is necessary to translate industry-leading insights into actionable plans, across different Business Areas and topics. The research service for CDIO should cover the following aspects:

General requirements

- Access to a research library providing independent, objective and expert re-search reports, tools, case studies to support HMRC achieving its objectives.
- Access to relevant research including but not limited to, IT implementation, design, architecture, engineering, support management, AI data and reference architectures.

- It is expected that the research material is regularly refreshed to support fast-moving areas such as AI or data.
- Access to strategic business content for technology leaders, supporting them to become better business partners and enterprise leaders
- Access to people who have done 'what we are doing' before in different contexts and can advise on pitfalls/best practice when evaluating different approaches, methods, technologies or strategies.
- Independent view of the market both from a technical perspective (what technologies are being used for what) and a business perspective (what approaches are working).
- Reviews of papers from an independent but expert point of view, for accuracy and messaging.
- Leadership content that is targeted at senior leaders to help transform HMRC.
- Support software development lifecycles, insights and best practices for source control, branching, merging, and software development lifecycles.
- Events/conferences access to ensure HMRC are aware of the evolving technologies and evolving IT challenges.
- Networking opportunities and introduction to peer organisations and people to dive deeper into relevant experiences.
- Access to peers across the domain to showcase HMRC to attract technology talent.

Ad-hoc advisory services

- Ad-hoc advisory service to help develop documentation supporting strategic tasks and key deliverables, relating to business change or transformation. Examples include strategy development, financial planning, roadmap development, e.g., transformation, AI etc., as well as specialist technology areas. Licences / subscriptions required:
