II.2.4) Description of the procurement

Throughout 2021, Cardiff and Vale Health Board has been conducting a trial for the Inari Flow Trierer.

The device is used for the mechanical aspiration of blood clots when treating high risk, acute pulmonary embolism. The Inari device has a calibre up to three times the diameter of similar devices.

Currently, the health board uses two other systems, which will continue to be used in appropriate cases. Through the acquisition of the Inari Flow Trierer, the health board will be able to treat large clot presentations with greater flexibility, resulting in decreased mortality and morbidity.

Without this purchase the health board will be unable to provide optimal treatment modalities for high-risk patients. This will result in an increased need for critical care access with a high incidence of mortality.
