Scope

Description

We are commissioning this project to increase our understanding of how structures at risk from coastal erosion have been adapted in the past. This could include being moved, or in certain circumstances completely lost where this is the only practicable option.

For identified cases, the project should seek to identify limitations, risks, constraints or opportunities and how this was managed from a policy, heritage significance, economic and social point of view.

This research will support other ongoing projects focusing on Multi Criteria Analysis and Adaptative Pathways.
