Description

As an evidence-based organisation, Natural England need to ensure that we have access to the best available information to guide our advice to decision making bodies on marine and coastal development works which may impact the Holderness coast. The aim of this project is to undertake an evidence review of the Holderness Inshore region, bringing together existing evidence and identifying evidence gaps that should be prioritised for future research. This will help inform our evidence base of the important habitats and species of the area. Please find further information within the specification of requirements.
